

On Saturday, October 17th, 2020, The Haunt Rater made the long journey over to Haunted Overload in Lee, New Hampshire. This trip has been 12 years in the making. For as long as we have known of Haunted Overload, we have had this place on our "All-Time Top Places to visit" and finally after 12 long years, we did it! They did not disappoint! They did an amazing job with social distancing and mask policies. We were happy to see how well they did with ensuring that all patrons followed directions for the safety of all.

We started out our time with Haunted Overload by taking part in the "Day Time" tour, having the opportunity to tour the entire attraction in the day time hours and see what it is like with the "lights on" so to speak. The designs and scene sets were just amazing. The work and craftsmanship was out of this world. This place is a true inspiration for many haunters looking for an example of an outstanding haunted attraction.

The intricacies of the designs were just so amazing and intricate. The structures that we have seen in many videos and ads look so much bigger in real life and this is an attraction that you must put on your "Haunt Bucket List" as a Must See in your lifetime! We suggest doing the daytime tour prior and then returning for the show at night as it makes you truly appreciate the attraction and efforts put into the show.

Prior to the start of the official show, we had the opportunity to be given a special behind the scenes tour by none other than "Maggie McPumpkin". We had the privilege of meeting the many people behind what makes this show so great, including Eric Lowther, owner of Haunted Overload. He is one of the most amazing people we have had the chance to meet. He is truly a class act and a real genuine person willing to help all in the Haunted Attraction Industry. He is a one of a kind. It is easy to see why the staff at Haunted Overload are all the same way and just as amazing as he is.

Once night fell, the ambiance changed from one of feeling safe to fear! Ghouls, ghosts, goblins, and creatures of the night fell upon Haunted Overload in preparation for an evening filled with your worst nightmares and what a terrifying experience it was. We did not realize that the Que-Line was as amazing as it was. We originally thought that the attraction began further back only to realize that the Que-Line is a major part of the Attraction and is made to be just as amazing as the attraction itself. We have never seen a Que-Line like this ever in our years of visiting haunted attractions.

Upon entering the attraction, you are greeted by a woman holding the coolest cat you will ever see. Careful, it may bite! You will continue on through a vortex tunnel where a hand will reach out of the darkness to direct your next destination. You will continue to weave in and out of a variety of scenes meeting the most ghoulish creatures. A deranged nurse, hideous monsters, disturbing clowns and...be sure to say hi to biscuit while you are there. He may play a song for you before your untimely demise!

This attraction is not only "out of this world" but it is "off the charts!" You need to go and see this attraction for yourself. Don't just take our word for it. Make the trip and see the show that is known as one of the best in the country! You will be hard to meet a better attraction and kinder people.

Their 2020 COVID-19 response and policies were great, and all was being followed as it should be. It was an honor and privilege to be able to visit a long-awaited attraction. Fantastic job from all actors and staff who were on hand to make this a great show and a great year! Thank you for an amazing time and for the best memories!
